

Workplace Giving for individuals

Give directly to the cause you care about

Thank you for your interest in supporting Fortem Australia through workplace giving.

Workplace giving is a joint relationship between employers, employees and not-for-profit organisations. Individuals contribute a portion of their pre-tax salary and receive the tax benefit straight away. Employers often match employee contributions to help make an even bigger impact.

Read on to find out more about the impact you could be having on first responder mental health and wellbeing, and how to sign up.

Your impact

Your support through our workplace giving program will allow us to expand our services and resources to more first responder families across Australia.

First responder work is inherently stressful. In serving our community, first responders are at increased risk of harm. They experience higher rates of psychological distress, psychological disorders, and suicidal thoughts. This is why we exist.

Since 2019 we have supported more than 13,000 first responders and their families across Australia:

9/10 participants recommend Fortem and want to take part in another wellbeing activity.

More than half of participants were more open to mental health support following an activity.

71% of participants with active PTSD symptoms showed reduction of symptoms to below diagnostic threshold following treatment.
